

ABSTRACT

A power-saving method for video-broadcasting system in liquid crystal display (LCD) equipment. The present invention utilizes programming to control the power supply of the back light source and the power supply of electrode plates, which can 5 decrease the overall power consumption of LCD without affecting its video-broadcasting quality.